CHINESE NEW YEAR SHORT COURSES ON RATS, RATS AND RATS!

The Year of the Rat is coming! It's time to brave the wintry days with families and friends, food and a lot of fun activities.

In the Chinese language, a lot of words related to farms and nature are associated with the celebration of the Chinese New Year. One example is '魚' ('fish'), which sounds like '餘', the Chinese word for surplus and abundance.

In English, there are also many stories and poems about rats and mice. They are cute, funny and sometimes cheeky – perfect for the Year of the Rat!

Come and join our fun Chinese New Year English learning activities and learn all about them!

P1 - P2

You will embark on a taste hunt with all kinds of delicious berries! To identify the features and tastes of different berries, you will need to make good use of your innate 'mouse skills'. We will eat berries, make food with berries and write stories about berries. Don't miss out on a special kind of berry from China: Goji berries!
